Disney's
A
Goofy
MOVIE

CROSS-COUNTRY CHAOS

Uh-oh. Now Max had done it. Forced to break his first date with Roxanne after his dad, Goofy, planned a father-son road trip, Max had fibbed. He told Roxanne that his dad was driving him to the televised Powerline rock concert in Los Angeles. He even lied and said that Goofy was friends with Powerline. Then Max promised to wave to Roxanne on TV.

Roxanne was so impressed, she wasn't mad that Max had broken their date. But now Max was miserable. Miles from home, with no chance of fulfilling his promise, Max took out his frustration on his dad. "This is the stupidest vacation!" he yelled.

Since Max was barely speaking to him, poor Goofy had no idea what was going on.

Then, at a campground, they bumped into Goofy's boss, Pete, and his son, P.J. On the roof deck of Pete's deluxe RV, Pete gave Goofy a parenting tip on keeping teenagers out of trouble: be firm.

So Goofy decided to make Max have a good time. “Get your gear.

We’re goin’ fishin’!” he ordered, and grabbed his pole.

Down at the lake, Goofy demonstrated “the perfect cast,” accidentally hooking Pete’s steak on the end of the fishing line and sending it flying clear across the water.

“And now we reel it in,” Goofy said to Max. It was a big one, all right! Goofy pulled and strained and reeled in a . . . Bigfoot! Goofy and Max took off. They made it to their car just in time.

But where were the keys? Outside the car, Bigfoot jingled the key ring. They were trapped. Now Max had to talk to his dad. Over a can of soup that they warmed by using the cigarette lighter, Goofy reminded Max that the two of them had once been very close.

Max felt bad. He knew he was being difficult. But he didn't think his dad would understand.

Late that night, as Bigfoot snoozed on top of their car and Goofy snored in the driver's seat, Max did something desperate. On the road map, he erased the route Goofy had marked and plotted a new course . . . for Los Angeles.

Back on the road the next day, Max felt awful about what he had done. And to make matters worse, Goofy had made him the official trip navigator.

“I trust ya wholeheartedly, son,” Goofy said. Max did not know what to say, so he didn’t say anything.

A few nights later at a motel, Goofy and Max met up again with Pete and PJ. Before long, Pete got wind of what Max was up to and informed Goofy: “I heard the little mutant telling PJ that he changed the map, so you’re headin’ straight to L.A., pal.”

Goofy was crushed. He did not want to believe that Max would lie to him.

But after a few more miles on the road, it was clear: they were headed due west to L.A.

Furious, Goofy pulled the car off the road and climbed out. Max followed, trying to explain. But just then, the car started rolling down the canyon road!

Goofy and Max raced after the runaway car and reached it just before it splashed into the river below. Then, as they floated downstream, Max finally told his dad everything: about Roxanne, about the lie, and about how he had changed their route.

Instead of scolding him, Goofy said, “Well, I think the only thing for us to do now is to get you up onstage with this Powerline feller!”

Just then Max realized something was terribly wrong. They were headed right for a waterfall! Goofy managed to get ashore, where he used his fishing pole to cast a line toward Max.

The hook caught hold of the car as it was rolling over the falls, but then —crack!— the log Goofy was standing on snapped. He fell into the river.

Meanwhile, all of their gear from the car had spilled out into the water. Backpacks and sleeping bags floated here and there. Max got tangled up in their tent. As he went over the falls, the tent deployed into a makeshift parachute. Max was saved! Then, after getting a hold of the fishing pole, Max cast a line toward Goofy—and reeled him in!

“Boy, what a crazy vacation!” exclaimed Max.

“And it’s not over yet!”
replied Goofy.
Together they hatched a plan.

Before
Max knew it,
he and his dad were in L.A., climbing out of instrument cases backstage at the Powerline concert. Their scheme had worked! Now they just had to get onstage. The concert was starting!

But Max and Goofy got separated. Max ran from a security guard, while Goofy stumbled inside a large stage prop. When the prop was transported onstage, Goofy popped out. Then, swinging on a lighting cable to evade the guard, Max joined him.

Max couldn't believe it! He and his dad were onstage and on TV—dancing with Powerline!

Back at home, Max's first stop was Roxanne's house. Even though he had got onstage with Powerline, he had to tell Roxanne that he had lied.

"I guess I just wanted you to like me," he explained to her.

“I already liked you, Max,” Roxanne replied. Then she asked Max if he was free that evening.

“How ’bout tomorrow?” he said. That night, Max had plans . . . with his dad!
